1. I was left waiting around for a while despite numerous attempts to begin interaction. I did finally get to see two ultrasounds. It was interesting to see how they changed the lights to accommodate the patients and make them feel more comfortable. I got to see a kidney ultrasound (including a urinary bladder) and a neck and head ultrasound. It was really interesting to see the different techniques used by the different sonographers. They would take screenshots of the important parts to show more trained professionals later.
2. The team approach is pretty friendly. They seem to all work together and get along as best as they can so that they can have the most efficient and happy environment.
3. The three words I would use to describe this work environment would be relaxed, calm, and happy. The lighting and moods of the workers seemed to indicate that they take most things slow and try to make it as comfortable for the patient as possible.
